Painting Wild Horses from Life Registration Form

AIA hosts Karen McLain to lead a three-day plein air Painting Workshop at Assateague Island National Seashore October 27-29, 2017; 9am to 5pm daily. Limited to 12, participants will discover techniques for painting the horse quickly and fluidly from life, observe effects of sunlight on the coat, overcome the difficulties of painting a moving subject and coping with the problems inherent in painting outdoors. Daily demonstrations will focus on painting the horse, beginning with emphasis on major compositional shapes, application of value and color in rapidly changing light and movement. Included in the workshop is a session on photographing wild horses for effective reference material, with Meredith Hudes-Lowder of Equus ferus Wild Horse Photography. Learn how to make the best of the light source, point of view and perspective, composition and editing programs. Tips on making the most out of your field experience will be provided. Portable equipment is required – Students will be working outdoors with wild horses in their natural setting. A suggested materials list will be provided upon registration.

Registration for the workshop is $300.00. Proceeds benefit Assateague Island National Seashore.
